Conclusions Drawn from Data:

Q1 measures organized religious activities were met in all lower and upper division courses.

Q2 measures the non-organizational religious activities were met in all courses for the criteria for success.

Q3-Q5 measure intrinsic religiosity and all of the courses met the expected measures.

These measures indicate that upper division students did not increase their organized religious activities over their college years, a trend that is consistent with DUREL data from all university settings.

These responses show that the instruction regarding accountability for non-organizational religious activities such as prayer, meditation or Bible Study throughout the GE instruction.

These responses show a high level of intrinsic religiosity and a desire to integrate religious beliefs into all of life throughout the college years.

Changes to be Made Based on Data:

Q1's data is different from last year's data. To better assess the impact of our GE courses on Christian discipleship, we analyzed an additional question (Q13) from our end-of semester survey that asked: Do you expect as a result of taking this class that there will be an impact in the future on your participation in Christian practices such as worship, prayer, Bible study, sharing your faith, and service to others.

Responses were placed on a scale from A (no impact) to E (strong impact). We set a measure of 60% would choose D or E on the strong impact side of the scale for THE 306 which has Christian discipleship within its CLOs and 50% for the BIB and CHU courses which focus more on Biblical knowledge and interpretation or the context of history and doctrine in the Christian tradition.
